Melanie Fauth is the co-founder of Ignite Wellbeing and holds a nursing degree with 25 years of executive leadership experience driving important strategic initiatives for a statewide hospital system. In each of her roles she has excelled at helping others tap into their greatest potential.

Her strengths are in systems-based strategies, connecting people, improving processes and building culture. Throughout her career, she has seen patients and their families, as well as leaders and front-line employees suffer from chronic stress and trauma as they navigate the complexities of life. Becoming certified in Mind Body Medicine underscored, for Melanie, that every individual can be empowered to help heal themselves through trauma and stress if taught evidenced based skills. Melanie uses her executive background to customize workshops/groups to meet the needs of individuals and organizations.

Melanie is married and a mother to two grown children and has a bonus son. She received her BA/BSN from DePauw University and is an Indiana University Tobias Leadership Fellow.
